Photoshop has always been the industry standard image manipulation program for so long that its name has become a verb. It's common parlance to say that an image has been "photoshopped," or even just "shopped," meaning that it's been edited or manipulated. As with any tool, Photoshop also has a learning curve. It's certainly helped by having a natural human interface, but there's still a lot to learn if you're just starting out. There are many components of Photoshop that combine to make a great image creation tool. This includes layers, which are handy for placing multiple images, adjusting their colors, or moving them around on a canvas. You can use a brush tool to paint directly on your image; you can make your own custom shapes; and you can use paths to mask certain parts of your image. The program uses a raster image canvas that is bitmapped. This means you can zoom in and out and layer on any parts of your image, change their colors and even move them on a digital canvas. You can use filters to sharpen an image or make it look aged. Many other features exist, but these are only the basics to get you started.

After you learn how to open an image and start editing, you'll want to learn how to best adjust your tool for that editing task. You can adjust the size of your work space, adjust the status bar to find where to make adjustments and quickly access your tools. You'll learn to select your image, cut it into layers and adjust layers. You can also use layers to control the way layers interact with each other. Then, you'll be able to move and resize individual layers on the canvas.

In this Photoshop tutorial I'll guide you through the fundamental steps in using Photoshop Elements to retouch an image to a higher standard. There will be some advanced features used and some of the steps may be skipped for those who prefer to just follow along. 1. Import the original image To begin, import your original photo into Photoshop Elements. 2. Open the Ref Photo overlay With the photo open in Photoshop Elements, press the 'G' key to open the Effects panel. Use the effects panel to create the new look you want. 3. Adjust the Photo Overlay layer's levels The Photo Overlay layer is active. In the Adjustments palette, click the 'L' key (for Levels). The levels display at the bottom of the Layers panel, change the settings for shadows, highlights and midtones as required. It is possible to get multiple toned images with just one click. Press 'K' to close the Levels window. 4. Apply the Basic Effects filters In the Effects panel, click the 'G' key to open the Filters panel. Use the Basic Effects panel to add effects such as soften or sharpen. The layer is named 'b' (Basic). Click the 'V' key (for View) to view the image as a Video Review. You can quickly view the overall look and feel of the image before you add any more effects. Press 'K' to close the Filters panel. 5. Reduce noise in the image To reduce noise, use the 'V' key to view the image in the Develop module. Use the Noise Reduction filter. This shows the result after applying the Noisy area removal filter. Click the Apply button to save your edits. The layer is named 'c' (Noise reduction). 6. Adjust the levels for the original image Use the Layers panel to highlight the original image layer 'a'. In the Adjustments palette, click the 'L' key (for Levels). Add the required levels as necessary. Press 'K' to close the Levels window. 7. Use the Custom Filter to create the final image Use the Layers panel to add a custom filter to 'a' and 'b'. Click the 'N' key to add the custom a681f4349e

Women's basketball eager to start 2013 at home The Tornado hope to host one of the final home games of the 2012-13 campaign tonight against Northwest Missouri State, and then host the Missouri Valley Women's Basketball Tournament next week. The last time all that happened to the girls was two years ago, when the West team was playing in Tulsa. "We've been here five out of the last six years, and I think that's good," sophomore Jordan Whitley said. "It's getting better, but this is the last chance we've had to win it all in a whole year. It's good for us to have all these games at home." Led by Whitley, a 6-foot senior forward, the West has been successful lately, winning its five last games by an average of nearly 19 points. The Tornado are 24-3, including a 21-game winning streak entering this week's contest. But none of that matters if the West doesn't win tonight. Article continues below... Coach Matthew Dearth said the team would need to stay focused during the five-day turnaround from last week. "It's a big concern," he said. "Getting this team to the point where we can play consistently is the biggest thing we need to do and we haven't been able to do it yet this year." Whitley said the team did well at the four in-season tournaments it has played in, so it will help with the transition. "We've been playing basketball for the last two years," she said. "It will be an adjustment, but we have to learn to adjust." One of the most important adjustments will be in the second half of games, a complaint expressed last year. "The first half of the season, we haven't gotten it done," senior guard Brittany Rodebaugh said. "We still have to take care of business in the second half." In the postseason, teams that win the second half of their games usually reach the Elite Eight. "The second half is the most important," Whitley said. "It's how good a team is, and our team is good. We just

What's New in the Adobe Photoshop 2022 (Version 23.0.1)?

Q: Index matching I have a list of ids and I am receiving different sets of ids based on the matching logic. For instance, The ids to be matched are 12345 and 55463. One matching set will be 12345,55463,2345. Another will be 12345,56789,2345 I need to know which one is correct (i.e. the correct matching set) The number of ids would be around 10000. What would be the best approach in this case? A: If you want the whole sequence of identifiers, you'll have to search through all the ids. If you want only the identifiers that you have by "hand", then you can do `SELECT id FROM table WHERE id IN (?, ?, ?, ?, ?)` where you list the ids that you have, and not, and then search from there. However, if you want only the ids matching, it's more efficient to create a bitmap index, or a materialized boolean index, on the column in question: `SELECT id FROM table WHERE id IN (?, ?, ?, ?, ?) AND id NOT IN (?, ?, ?, ?, ?) AND id NOT IN (?, ?, ?, ?, ?) AND id NOT IN (?, ?, ?, ?, ?) AND id NOT IN (?, ?, ?, ?, ?) AND id NOT IN (?, ?, ?, ?, ?) AND id NOT IN (?, ?, ?, ?, ?) AND ...` This will give the same result as the bitmap index that Andres F. mentions, but it will be more efficient. Q: Is there a way to specify the display location of a self-signed certificate when it is used? Here's a problem that I have come up against when setting up a web service - when I verify the certificate chain, I need to verify the validity of the certificate used to verify the root cert because it could have been issued to anyone. To do this, I need to check the details of the certificate by calling the `X509Certificate2.GetRawCertData()` method. My question is, what do you do when you have a self-signed certificate
