My son is going to enter law school next year and I am having a hard time choosing between the two schools I applied to. The one with the lower GPA and MCAT is going to get him in because of their "pre-law" curriculum which I believe will look better on his transcript. However the other school's MCAT is a "soft" one that is weighted heavily toward the verbal sections and not so much the quantitative, and while I believe that my son has good enough math skills to make it to law school, I don't know whether he will be as strong in the verbal sections as the MCAT may show. I am not sure what is the best course of action to take. I know that my MCAT score will be slightly lower than that of his, but I am not sure how the admissions committee will value that score and I know that we live in a very litigious society and will be in danger of accreditation if he isn't in the top ten. What would you suggest I do? Thank you. Medcurso 2013 pdf Ryan, Step 2: Submit your application and application fee to your preferred school's financial aid office.
