It was Time to Jump! I think I was right! Loved it? Give a Rating! Here is my submission to the "Jam World building Paradise" contest! We are on the last 2 days before the deadline, but don't let that daunt you. You have until Tuesday to submit your entry! Posted to Cubivore.com site. Hi! This tutorial is about drawing a fantastic composition with cubes. You could use the same concept for drawing different kinds of objects. This is an example of my game, I would like to submit it to the online contest. I want to "Play the Jam", please let me know when you play and rate. Your feedback is important for me. Some features of the game are: - You control the little cube flying through the cube world where you can meet other cubes that can help you or harm you. - Each cube has different abilities - fireballs, light sources, evil cubes etc. - The goal of the game is to explore the cube world and finally you can find a cube with a special ability. - The action game has a realist look. Hi and welcome to "Cubivore". This is how I design a game. I start with the character model with different poses for every camera angle. The character could have a unique look, like Vampire: D Kind's character, he could be a prince in the Middle ages, the futuristic version of the knight etc. The game should not be just a platform, but an RPG with RPG elements like you find in Mario. The entire environment should not look like a Mario game, it should look like a game where the player can move through the different rooms to face different characters or enemies or other puzzles. There are different objects that you can discover: fireballs, bushes, springs, big chasms, puzzle. The player has to look for some of these objects to overcome the obstacles or to
